Statement of Condemnation Regarding the Targeting of Telecommunications Facilities in Amran and Saada Provinces by U.S. Aggression

The Ministry of Telecommunications and Information Technology condemns the crime of U.S. aggression targeting telecommunications networks in Amran and Saada provinces. At dawn on Friday, Ramadan 28, 1446 AH (March 28, 2025), U.S. warplanes targeted the telecommunications network in Al-Aswad Mountain in Amran province with five airstrikes. Similarly, the telecommunications network at the Labda site in Saada province was hit by multiple airstrikes, resulting in the complete destruction of broadcasting stations, communication towers, and transmission networks at these locations. This led to the disruption of telecommunications and internet services in several areas, depriving tens of thousands of citizens of these essential services

The U.S. aggression launched these hostile airstrikes on civilian facilities that provide essential services to citizens, coinciding with the recent deliberate and indiscriminate bombings of several civilian sites by the U.S. enemy in multiple provinces of the republic. These attacks have led to the martyrdom and injury of dozens of citizens and caused significant material damage to public and private properties

The Ministry of Telecommunications and Information Technology affirms that the deliberate U.S. bombing of these civilian facilities is a continuation of the American-Saudi aggression and its allies against the Yemeni people. This aggression has included the systematic and ongoing destruction of the telecommunications and postal sector for ten years, which began under U.S. leadership on March 26, 2015. This renewed criminal aggression is a new step in the American enemy's efforts to divide and destroy the telecommunications sector in Yemen by establishing illegal entities in occupied provinces and introducing unauthorized and unlicensed services in those areas through companies linked to its intelligence agencies, such as Starlink and others

These American crimes are all aimed at destroying the telecommunications sector, which serves all citizens across the Republic of Yemen. They clearly expose the ugliness of the U.S. enemy's actions and its malicious criminal objectives against our people and nation. Unfortunately, these crimes continue amid international silence from the global community and the International Telecommunication Union

Accordingly, the Ministry of Telecommunications and Information Technology holds the United States of America fully responsible—legally, ethically, and for all resulting losses and consequences of these crimes, past and present
